

Mamas House: Civil War Romance Book 2

December 1865 The Civil War has finally ended. Cities now begin the process of reconstruction while families learn to live without husbands, fathers, and sons. Karalee must keep the promise she made at her Mothers bedside: return Mama to her beloved childhood home. At the first sign of spring, no matter how torn up the South is, Mother says they are leaving for Charleston. She wonders where she belongs: In Cassopolis where she was born with the precious memories in Fathers house or in Charleston, starting a new life? What will become of her fragile relationship with Jackson? Karalee remembers his tender kiss but fears their newfound understanding is unraveling. If she leaves, will he follow?
